

In this first piece of the series “Mirrors” I want to explore the dichotomy of self perception and exterior perception on the individual. To do so I ask the model how they perceive themselves or how they wish to be perceived, draw them how they are dressed in reality, and create a reflection of them using what they said in our conversation. This particular model sees herself as mysterious, powerful, attractive, and euphoric, so I tried to emphasize these characteristics into a glowing deity of the model. Self perception is important to understand, and through continuing this series I hope to create more characters that help viewers think and learn something about their self image for self love and growth.
