Student Travel Award

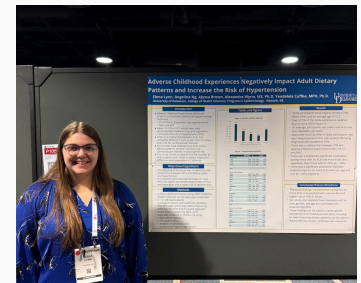

The Undergraduate Research Program funded Elena Lynn, a Senior Health Behavior Science Major, to go to the American Heart Association EPI Lifestyles Conference in New Orleans, Louisiana

About Elena's experience:

"Attending the American Heart Association Epi Lifestyles conference was very beneficial. This conference was a great opportunity to see the cutting edge research being done in the field. This conference also allowed me to be able to present my current research and I was able to speak with influential people in the field and make connections. This helps to further my career in this field as well meet people who currently work in the field. This conference has taught me a lot and I plan to continue doing research and presenting in the future."
